Six passengers were painfully injured and a hundred others badly shaken up yesterday evening at 6:30 o'clock in a collision between Page avenue car No. 1782 and Vandeventer car No. 1175, at the intersection of Vandeventer and Finney avenues. The force of the impact threw the Vandeventer avenue car on its side, overturned the stove and caused a panic among the fifty passengers who were aboard at the time of the accident, and who had to be taken from the car through the windows.

The Vandeventer car, in charge of Con ductor Ernest Kaiser of No. 3652 Easton avenue, and Motorman Ben Campbell of No. 627 Ridge avenue, was proceeding north and on approaching the Finney ave-nue crossing came to a halt at the south side of the street. The Page avenue car was westbound, and in charge of Con-ductor Joseph Hopkins of No. 5708 Von Ver-sen avenue and Motorman Charles Wil-helm of No. 4442 Easton avenue.

Motorman Wilhelm saw the Vandeventer car come to a stop before crossing Fin.ey avenue, and, supposing the latter would await the Page car's passing, released his brake. A moment later the Vandeventer car started forward and was half way across the tracks when the crash came. The Vandeventer car was hurled on its side and badly crushed. The shock of the collision threw the passengers violently from their seats and created a panic among the women, many of whom fainted.

The car crews and pedestrians at once set work to release the imprisoned passengers of the Vandeventer car. One by one they were drawn through the windows, and, if injured, carried to Charles Booker's drug store at the corner of Finney and Vande-venter avenues, where their injuries were dressed. All were able to reach their homes without resistances.

told him the money must be delivered or he would be arrested.

Roller was walking through the Midway at Union Station, when he was accosted by a man who told him he was a stranger in the city and wanted to have a companion, while waiting for his train. After walking in the neighborhood of the Union Station the stranger invited Roller to accompany him to a place where he thought he could find some friends. They went to a house on Washington avenue, the exact location being unknown to Roller, who was a stranger in the city.

Roller says two men were in the room and one was lamenting the fact that he had lost $100 at a card game. Roller's "friend" asked the man to show how he lost the money. He shuffled up a deck of cards and in the way of explanation asked Roller to pick one out of the deck. As he did so, a man came into the room who represented himself to be an officer, who said he was going to raid the house. Roller says the supposed officer asked him how much money he had, and when he told him the had $90, the "officer" told him if he would give him the money there would be no arrests. Roller delivered the money.

EXPANSION OF TRADE WORK OF CONGRESS, MR. GARDINER'S THEME

Philippine Bill to Be Acted Upon In Address to New York Credit Men He Dwells on Importance of Oriental Commerce.

> New York, January 22.-The regular monthly meeting and dinner of the New York Credit Men's Asociation, was held to-night. The principal address was delivered by Charles A. Gardiner, a wellknown corporation lawyer, who talked up-on the "Expansion of Commerce in the United States." He said in part:

"Unquestionably the sceptre of empire and the seat of finance and trade are passing westward, from England to the United States. Our exports now lead the world; our manufactures will soon follow; our national resources are unequalled; our population is excelled only by Russia; and our aggregate political forces are the most powerful among the nations. In all essen-tial elements of nationality England is now second and the United States first. But our predominance does not mean England's de-cadence. The change simply follows the evolution of the race-the new England on a vast continent, grown larger and richer and stronger than the old England in her island home.

"Of all the nations struggling for the trade of the Orient, ours is the only one raturally entitled to it. London and Paris and Berlin and St. Petersburg are on the other side of the globe; but we have a Pa-cific Coast line of 4.000 miles. Within the last four years we have pushed that line 2,000 miles farther out to Hawaii. In the very center of the Pacific we have one of the Samoan group. We own the Alcutian Islands near Japan. And now we are in the Philippines, within 600 miles of the the Philippines, within 600 miles of the gates of China.

"Facing the Pacific and Indian occans are 803,000,000 people, more than half the population of the globe. Excluding North America, the foreign commerce of these peoples already amounts to $2,500,000,000 a year. History shows that whatever nation controls this commerce controls the trade of the world. The stake at issue is stupendous. With the Philippines, Ladrones, Samoa and Hawaii, our possessions reach across the Pacific; on all great trade and cruising routes an American ship is never more than 2,000 miles from an American port; the Pacific itself is ours primarily; our territory bounds it on two sides; our islands dot its surface; and with the ocean and its islands in our possession, an isthmian canal leading the Atlantic and Gulf commerce straight to India, China and Japan, American banks established in all Asiatic trade centers, a great merchant marine pouring out of every Pacific port from San Diego to Scattle, and swelling the tides of trade that roll back and forth over the Pacific—why should not the commerce of America in a larger degree than of any other nation?"

"Transportation" was the subject of an address by Mark I. Wilbur whe developed other nation?"
"Transportation" was the subject of an address by Mark L. Wilbur, who devoted the major portion of it to advocating the building of the Nicaraguan Canal and the improvement of the Erie Canal.

conclusion, for the administration is anxious that the question should be settled with as little delay as possible. Our friends on the other side desire to debate it at some length, so I imagine it may take a week or more before we reached a vote.

"We will have to wait for the House to act on the Cuban question before taking up the relief measure. The proposition to reduce the war tax has also to originate in the House, so we will have to wait until that measure comes to us. Some reasonable concession will be made to Cuba.

"In the meantime we may take up the canal question and consider it. As it originally stood, there was no doubt about the Nicaragua Canal bill, but in view of recent developments it may take more time to dispose of the canal question."

Senator Allison's statement regarding the canal question is taken as foreshadowing action by Congress. It has become clear within the last forty-eight hours that the men who are opposed to any canal and have relied on the Panama report to destroy all the chances of canal legislation have misread the signs of the times. Leaders in the Senate, like Allison Platt, Aldrich and Spooner, favor careful consideration of the question, but agree with Senator Hanna that there should be action just as soon as the majority party decides which is the best route. Topeka, Kas., Jan. 22 .- The reciprocity onvention, called at the suggestion of Governor Stanley, after a conference with representatives of the leading commercial and industrial interests of the State, held and industrial interests of the State, held its initial session in Representative Hall at 1 o'clock to-day. HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS RECEIVE DIPLOMAS.

Semiannual Graduating Exercises Are Held at the Odeon, Followed by Dancing.

The midyear graduating exercises of the High School were held in the presence of 3,000 spectators at the Odeon last night, and after the sixty-three diplomas . had been distributed the young men of the graduating class gave a dance in the hall upstairs to the young ladies and their friends,

The music hall of the Odeon had been prettily decorated in the class colors of the graduates, red and green. The stage was hedged with palms and festooned with smilax, and from the celling hung a heavy standard made of arbor vitae, on which in red was the class motto, "Esse Quam Vi-Jetl'-To be rather than to seem-but which was archiy put by one of the graduates as "Be wise if you can't look wise."

On seats banked at the back of the stage sat the graduating class, the boys in evening dress and the girls in white gowns. Behind them were the members of the class which will be graduated next June. In all, nearly 200 were on the stage.

Of the graduates, thirteen girls and four boys had completed the classical course twenty-three girls and thirteen boys the scientific course, two girls and seven boys the business course and twenty-two girls the normal course.

The exercises began with a chorus,

"Praise and Thanksgiving." by the mem-bers of the graduating class. This was followed by an essay upon "Joan of Arc," by Miss Laura C. A. Krenning, and an ora-tion on the "Naval Battle at Santiago," by Laurence G. Beauvais. Both these speak-ers, as all those who followed them, showed careful preparation and spoke easily and with good address.

The High School Boys' Mandolin Club of nearly twenty pleces, next took the platform with a selection, "Aeolian Larp Sounds," which was twice encored. The members of the club sprung a surprise on their leader, Thomas William Ross, of the graduating class. One of the players stepped to the loot and presented to Mr. Ross a handsome gold watch fob as a token of regard, saying that since Mr. Ross had taken charge of the club three years ago, instead of their former professional conductor, the work had improved both in quality and in enjoyment.

Young Ross attempted to reply, but youchsafed that the gift "had knocked ali the 'say' out of him, and then called upon the club to play the Olympic march, which was also enchored.

Miss Mabel I. Coates, whose good record throughout her four years in the High School has won for her a free scholarship at Washington University, appeared next on the programme with an essay entitled "Modern Chivalry." This was followed by an oration on "Liberty and Civilization," by George John Yeager. The class then sang a chorus, "Fairy Monlight."

Miss Hildah Levy read an essay on "Self-Cultivation in English" and Freston Allen Richardson gave an oration on the subject, "Our Public Schools," followed by the High School Boy's Glee Club, which sang two numbers, both being encored.

"The American Girl," and "True American Ideals" were the subjects, respectively, of an essay by Miss Gladys Walton and an oration by Oscar Arnold Schilling. They were followed by a class chorus, "The Linden Tree."

DECLARES HE WAS MISQUOTED Major Hunter Says He Did Not

Criticise the Army.

Criticise the Army.

Major George K. Hunter of the Fifteenth Cavairy, who is now at Jefferson Barracks on leave of absence, in discussing an article in an afternoon paper auoting him as having criticised Uncle Sam's military system and ridiculing General Shafter, said last night;

"The statements ascribed to me in the article in the afternoon paper are ridiculous and misleading. They pursort to be extracts from a speech delivered by me at the banquet given to Poultney Bigelow by the Contemporary Club Monday night. The afternoon paper in question had no representative at the banquet, and the speech I made on that occasion was evidently misinterpreted by somebody who heard it and repeated it in that form to the paper. The paper sent a representative down to see me this morning to ask me if the statements accredited to me were correctly reported and I lold the representative was I had said at the banquet, as closely as I could remember its substance. The representative, in detailing our interview of this morning, has misquoted me and placed me in a faise light

"At the banquet I was called upon for a speech following Mr. Bigelow. I am not an apt or fluent after-dinner speaker, having been called upon to speak in public only three or four times. I did not consider that the gentlemen of the Contemporary Club desired me to critizise the remarks of the speaker who preceded me, whose speech dealt considerably with the military system and methods of the United States Government. When I arose, therefore, I said that I did not wish to take issue with Mr. Bigelow, and that I subscribed to nearly nil he had said. I spoke of Germany's need for a large standing army, owing to the conditions confronting her on every side, and said that the splendid discipline of her troops was an outgrowth of that necessity. I said that the only criticism made by foreign officers of our cipline of her troops was an outgrowth of that necessity. I said that the only criticism made by foreign officers of our soldiers was the absence of that strict discipline applied to small details for which commanders of foreign troops are stickiers. Foreign officers say that our men are born righters, hardy campaigners, unexcelled marksmen, loyal and obedient, but that they are not soldiers, in that they do not observe all the little details of military precision of movement which are apparent in the German troops in the field as on parade.

precision of movement which are apparent in the German troops in the field as on parade.

"I then went on to describe the valor of our troops in the Spanish-American and Chinese troubles, and as I remember it paid them a high compliment. I did refer to General Shafter and the battle of San Juan Hill, but did not criticise him nor say anything which could be construed as a violation of the r-my regulations regarding discussion of my superiors. I referred, in passing to what has been frequently alluded to in the official reports and public prints, namely, that General Shafter was sick in bed at the time of the battle, perspiring profusely and greatly distressed.

"So much for the speech. In my interview with the reporter this morning I said that we had a splendid military system, a most efficient corps of instructors at West Point, and a Secretary of War whom I, as well as every other officer, regarded as one of the most competent men who had ever held the office, and whose earnest interest in promoting the welfare of the service is manifested in his efforts in securing the passage of a bill which will increase the effectiveness of the army. The reporter misquotes me as saying that the efficiency of the army is being undermined by politics. That is ridiculous. I have a son who is now a cadet at West Point, and it does not seem reasonable that I would give utterance to such absurd statements as are accredited to me. The entire article is sensational, and misleading, and I cannot fathom the motive for its publication."
